FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. Over sixty percent of the Mississippi high school graduates who attend college do so at the community colleges. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the recommended course of study. Studies reveal that community college transfer students perform at a par with the native student at four-year institutions.

Community colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary occupational programs in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the schools. Community colleges also provide a variety of continuing education, community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility to respond to needs of a given segment of the state's society. This sensitivity is the result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Community and Junior College Association, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges, which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, approves vocational and technical programs and attendance centers, assembles reports, and provides general coordination. The State Board of Education (K-12) serves as the State Board for Vocational Education, and through its Bureau of Vocational and Technical Education administers programs on the secondary and post-secondary level.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. Over sixty percent of the Mississippi high school graduates who attend college do so at the community colleges. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the recommended course of study. Studies reveal that community college transfer students perform at a par with the native student at four-year institutions.

Community colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary occupational programs in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the schools. Community colleges also provide a variety of continuing education, community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility to respond to needs of a given segment of the state's society. This sensitivity is the result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Community and Junior College Association, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges, which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, approves vocational and technical programs and attendance centers, assembles reports, and provides general coordination. The State Board of Education (K-12) serves as the State Board for Vocational Education, and through its Bureau of Vocational and Technical Education administers programs on the secondary and post-secondary level.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. Over seventy percent of all freshmen enrolled in Mississippi's post-secondary institutions (both public and private) are enrolled in Mississippi's public community and junior colleges. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the recommended course of study. Studies reveal that community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary occupational programs and workforce education in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the schools. Community colleges also provide a variety of continuing education, community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility to respond to needs of a given segment of the state's society. This sensitivity is the result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Community and Junior College Association, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges, which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, approves vocational and technical programs and attendance centers, assembles reports, and provides general coordination.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the recommended course of study. Studies reveal that community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary occupational programs and workforce education in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the schools. Community colleges also provide a variety of continuing education, community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility to respond to needs of a given segment of the state's society. This sensitivity is the result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Community and Junior College Association, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges, which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, approves vocational and technical programs and attendance centers, assembles reports, and provides general coordination.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the recommended course of study. Studies reveal that community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary occupational programs and workforce education in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the schools. Community colleges also provide a variety of continuing education, community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility to respond to needs of a given segment of the state's society. This sensitivity is the result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Community and Junior College Association, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges, which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, approves vocational and technical programs and attendance centers, assembles reports, and provides general coordination.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges, which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment and civil rights compliance, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, manages the Mississippi Virtual Community College, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges, which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment and civil rights compliance, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, manages the Mississippi Virtual Community College, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges, which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment and civil rights compliance, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, manages the Mississippi Virtual Community College, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the Mississippi Community College Board. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the Mississippi Community College Board (formerly the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges), which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the Mississippi Community College Board. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the Mississippi Community College Board (formerly the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges), which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the Mississippi Community College Board. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the Mississippi Community College Board (formerly the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges), which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the Mississippi Community College Board. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the Mississippi Community College Board (formerly the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges), which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the Mississippi Community College Board. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the Mississippi Community College Board (formerly the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges), which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the Mississippi Community College Board. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the Mississippi Community College Board (formerly the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges), which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.

FOREWORD

As the first state to establish a system of public community colleges, the state has fifteen comprehensive community college districts which provide educational programs and services that are accessible to virtually all Mississippi citizens. This has been a goal of these two-year institutions since the first one began admitting students in 1922. All public community colleges are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Mississippi Commission on College Accreditation.

This network of institutions operates both university transfer and occupationally-oriented programs. A student may transfer earned credits to four-year institutions without loss of credit if the student has followed the Articulation Agreement between the MS Board of Trustees of State Institutions of Higher Learning and the Mississippi Community College Board. Studies reveal that Mississippi community college transfer students perform as well or better than the native students at Mississippi's public four-year institutions.

Community and junior colleges are the primary delivery mechanism for post-secondary career and technical education programs and workforce training in Mississippi. These programs of two-years or less duration are designed to prepare students for immediate employment and for upgrading skills of those currently employed. Training programs in more than one hundred occupational skills are provided by the colleges. They also provide a variety of continuing education, as well as community and public service activities. The institutions are funded by state appropriations, local district taxes, student tuition and fees and federal grants.

A characteristic of Mississippi's community colleges is their flexibility and rapid response to the changing needs of their service districts. This is a direct result of an administration and a board of control operating at the local level. Each college district has a local governing board which employs the president and faculty, owns property, establishes budgets for operation and capital improvement, and sets policies for the general governance of the institution. Cooperation by the various institutions on state-wide endeavors is accomplished through the Mississippi Association for Community and Junior Colleges, a voluntary organization of the institutions represented by their presidents.

State coordination and oversight is provided by the Mississippi Community College Board (formerly the State Board for Community and Junior Colleges), which on July 1, 1986, was named successor to the Junior College Commission. With regard to the system of community colleges, the State Board establishes standards for operation, administers state appropriations, audits enrollment, approves career and technical education programs, accredits schools of practical nursing, approves campuses, centers, and sites, assembles reports, and provides general coordination, support, leadership and advocacy.
